

The cost of a divorce depends on many factors, such as whether children are involved and the amount of property and debt at stake. However, the main factor is how contentious each spouse is about the issues you have.

If you and your spouse have gone through mediation with a professional divorce mediator, have come to an agreement on all the issues involved in a divorce and have a written Memorandum Of Understanding from the mediator, I charge a flat rate of $1300 (including Court costs of $340 and fees of $960) to convert that Memorandum Of Understanding into a Judgment of Divorce.

The fees and costs in representing you in divorce where you do not have a Memorandum of Understanding from a mediator is something we can discuss once I meet with you and know what could be involved in your divorce.
